JEWELL

COLUMBIA (MO.) MISSOURIAN, Sun., Sept. 6, 1964

Page 7

By Gail Gernstein

Jewell Cemetery, located one mile south of Columbia on Providence Road is a cemetery surrounded by thick stone walls. A plaque on the rusted gate that guards the cemetery says, "No one, not the husband, wife, or child of a descendant of George Jewell can be buried here."

This is Jewell Cemetery and, true to the stipulation of the sign, no one but Jewells, Jewell relatives or Jewell slaves rest there.

...According to Mrs. Botts the cemetery probably was once part of the George Jewell farm. George Jewell came about 1820. He was born in Virginia in 1765 and died here in 1841.

The first grave that is marked with an inscription is marked with an inscription is that of the second wife of Dr. William Jewell, son of George, who came to Missouri from the East with his father. The second wife, Cynthia, died at the age of 29. His daughter died after marriage, one son died at 17, and a grandson lived to be only 21.

According to the late Frank Tull, onetime president of the Historical Society, William Jewell "was unquestionably the biggest peioneer in Columbia - the Thomas Jefferson of Boone County, and he was interested in medicine, architecture, education, business, real estate and government."

Dr. William was Columbia's mayor when Broadway was laid out and was responsible for many of the streets of the city today. Interested in all kinds of public enterprise, he sponsored a race track laid out in 1832 on part of what is now the campus of the University, but only on the condition that there would be no Sunday racing. In 1847 he supervised the construction of the old Boone County Courthouse whose columns remain on the southeast corner of the present square.

Also buried in Jewell Cemetery is Charles Henry Hardin, a former governor of Missouri. The governor's mother was Hannah Jewell, daughter of George Jewell. The governor's wife, Mary, was a sister to the grandmother of Mr. Botts.

It was the governor, according to Mrs. Botts, who left the cemetery to Boone County and left money to see that it was cared for. In Item 8 of his will of 1891 he bequeathed "to the county of Boone, Missouri, the Jewell cemetery and all the grounds thereto..... and also $1,000 all upon the condition that said county shall cause to be expended through its proper agencies at least $50 annually in preserving said cemetery."

...The Botts family is related to the Jewell family a second way through Angelina A. Jewell Wilson, the daughter of Dr. William, who married a great uncle of Mr. Botts.

..."George did have three daughters, all of whom married and had children. But what became of them I just don't know. As far as descendants carrying the Jewell name, they very likely died out with the death of William's 21 year old son."

"As far as I know there is no one left who is eligible to be buried in the Jewell Cemetery. I don't think there is a single descendant of George Jewell alive," she said. (Mrs. Botts)
